Judge David M. Rhea, the golden-throated Demagogue of Lincoln county, is sojourning in Guthrie. Judge thinks the capital city is a summer resort and, being an optimist, expects to take a plunge bath in the cottonwood or eat a regular meal.

Stop Reckless Driving.

The reckless driving across the Noble avenue bridge should be looked after by our city. There is a fine of five dollars for every one found guilty of riding or driving in a faster gal than a walk over this structure, and yet this law is ruthlessly broken every hour in the day. The LEADER thinks it would be a wise plan to see that this $5 stipulation be enforced.

Another Large Lie.

Last week THE LEADER gave "A Special" taken from the Oklahoma in which Mr. Jones charges were made against Governor Renfrow. The reliability of that sheet is shown in the following "Special" printed yesterday.

Governor Renfrow is in Guthrie and Secretary Lowe is sojourning with his family at Geuda Springs.

THE GOVERNOR'S VACATION.

GUTHRIE, July 5.—Governor Renfrow left today for a trip to Montreal, the Thousand Isles, the Great Lakes and other northern summer resorts. He expects to be gone about sixty days and Secretary Lowe will act as governor during that time.

Right Here.

Now is your chance to buy the fast and pading mare in Logan county. Has no record but can show a mile in 2:30. She can be seen at the fair grounds. She will be sold at public auction at the above named grounds on Wednesday, July 11, at 10 a. m.

Military Accidents.

Several boxes of goods were received from Washington yesterday for the local militia.

Gene East.

Mr. George Willis, the popular tailor, left this morning for New York city and other original points. While absent he will combine business and pleasure and return home with an elegant stock of fall goods. Mr. Willis says he will not buy such a prodigious stock that dealers will fall sick, but expects to get enough of the choicest and best to supply the territorial demand. George is one of the best tailors in the West and treats his customers courteous. He engages in no wrangles, but keeps right on making substantial and well-fitting suits for the people.

YOUNG MEN AT THE FRONT.

Few Veterans to Be Found Among European Sovereigns and Statesmen.

Lord Rosebery's accession to the premiership serves to call attention to the fact that whereas during the past decade after the Franco-German war, and throughout the major part of the second, the destinies of Europe were controlled by monarchs and statesmen of advanced age, their power is now vested in the hands of comparatively young men. This is, indeed, the epoch of youth. Lord Beaconsfield, Prince Gortchakoff, Prince Bismarck, M. Thiers, Depretis, Gladstone and the Danish statesman, Estrup, have all either died or withdrawn into private life, and the same may be said of their masters. The German emperor, who is undoubtedly the man at the helm in the Teutonic empire, is only 31 years old; the prince of Russia is 33, the emperor of Portugal is 35, while the king of Greece is 37. Still more youthful are the queen of Holland, the young king of Serbia and the little king of Spain. As regards statesmen, we find young men, such as Lord Rosebery and Mr. Asquith, occupying the principal offices of the British crown. The Austrian prime minister, Prince Windischgratz, is under 30, and Cardinal Rampolla, the papal secretary of state, is barely one or two years over that age. M. Casimir-Perier, the French prime minister, is about 45 years of age, while M. Dupuy, his predecessor, and now president of the chamber of deputies, is about three years younger. Many other names might be added to the list, but the above will suffice to show that we are living in this golden age of youth, and that while age and experience are at a discount youth and enthusiasm are at a premium.

TRAPPED AND FOUGHT A BEAR.

A Mountaineer's Desperate Struggle With an Infuriated Bear.

A mountaineer named Jess Sands had a terrible conflict with a bear in Greasy Creek, near Johnson City, Tenn., recently. The animal had been entrapped during the night, and when Sands came upon the scene he went directly up to the bear before making an effort to shoot it. He was standing a few feet away when the infuriated beast made a lunge, broke its fetters and was upon him in an instant. Before the surprised hunter could get his gun in position the bear seized his left arm in its crushing jaws, the weapon dropped from the hand of the mangled limb and a battle of death began. In a moment the mountaineer was in the broad embrace of his antagonist. They fell to the ground in the struggle which ensued, and rolling over and over they went down the mountain side thirty yards and dropped off a ledge of rocks twelve feet sheer fall. The bear happened to fall underneath and during the momentary shock which followed the half dead man managed to draw from his belt his hunting knife, which fortunately had remained undisturbed, and plunged it with all his strength into the animal's neck, severing the jugular vein. This ended the battle. The bear soon released his hold and was dead, but his slayer was too badly hurt to leave the scene of the struggle. His continued absence caused his friends to go in search of him. They found the victor covered with blood and pillowed upon his shaggy victim nursing his mangled arm. The bear was one of the largest ever killed in that region.

THEY DIDN'T FRATERNIZE.

The Old Circus Man Had to Give Up the Lion and Lamb's Effect.

"The hardest thing to train a wild beast to do is to perform with a weak, defenseless animal," remarked A. L. Hutchins, an old circus and menagerie hand, who had deserted the arena and ring for mercantile pursuits, as a commercial traveler. "I remember once, several years ago, an effort being made to persuade a very docile lion to lie down with a lamb. The idea was certainly a good one but it took several lambs and also several weeks before the lion, which was willing to jump through a burning hoop, sham death on being shot, etc., could be persuaded to allow a lamb to enter his den with impunity. Twice he killed a lamb in the presence of his trainer, and the second time he nearly killed the trainer, who rather recklessly tried to get away from the carcass. Finally the lion would tolerate a lamb in his den just as long as the keeper stood over it with an iron bar. But the effort was so evidently forced and the performance was so utterly lacking in smoothness and interest that it was abandoned after two or three attempts."

Men and Yellow.

"It is an odd fact," said Anson Bryson, of Chicago, "that a true one, that men, as a rule, do not like yellow. I saw this fact set forth in a paper the other day, and until then it did not occur to me that it was so. But ask your men friends what they think of dresses of yellow, and they will object if they think about the thing at all. A woman, to my notion, makes a mistake to put on a yellow dress if she is setting her cap for the average man."

The Duchess Milks.

The duchess of Hamilton has had a large stable built for her cows and goes there daily, according to English papers, to milk her favorites. She also makes the butter, it is said, which is used on her table when she has guests. The stable is built of marble, and cost a large sum of money. The duchess has had gloves made especially to use when milking the cows, in order that she may not soil her fingers.

A Good Appointment.

Dr. A. H. Littrell was yesterday appointed by the board of commissioners for the county, to the office of county physician. This office in this county has hitherto been unfilled but now it is deemed best owing to the many cases requiring attention to designate a medical man as county physician. As stated he was made yesterday. Dr. Littrell is the Democrat judge, a good man for the place. We may speak of this later.—Perry Democrat.

NAPOLEON I.

How the Great Emperor Made His Toilet in the Morning.

One of the most interesting articles found among the recent numerous essays upon the private life of Napoleon is on the toilet of the emperor, which, it appears was a most important matter and regulated down to the smallest details with mathematical precision. When awakened it was Napoleon's custom to glance over the papers while the fires were lit. He was sensitive to cold and a fire was prepared in every room even in mid-summer. Then of distinguished people awaiting an audience he would designate those whom he wished to see after which he would rise and take a hot bath lasting about an hour. The daily shaving was the next duty. Ordinarily his physician, Corvisart, would be present, chatting and securing favors for his friends. Napoleon's greeting was usually some badinage, such as, "Ah, charlatan! How many patients have you killed this morning?" And the physician would reply in kind. Two valets were necessary for shaving, one holding the basin and another the mirror. The emperor, in a flannel robe de chambre, then covered his face with soap and began to shave. Throwing off his robe, Napoleon was next deluged with eau de Cologne and subjected to a thorough scrubbing with a rough brush. The valet then rubbed the whole body with linen cloth saturated with eau de Cologne—a custom that Napoleon had acquired in the East. The scrubbing was none of the lightest either, for he would call out from time to time, "Harder—rub harder." When the scrubbing was over the emperor dressed himself. A curious detail of his customs was the religious care with which he kept his round his neck the little leather envelope, slipped like a heart, which contained the poison that was to liberate him in case of irretrievable reverses of fortune. This poison was prepared after a recipe that (Abanis had given to Napoleon, and after the year 1805 the emperor never undertook a campaign without having his little packet of poison.

TAX ON DEATH.

Escaped by Smuggling a Corpse From Mexico.

In Mexico, when a foreigner dies and his friends desire to send his body to his native land, the government exacts a tax of $250 for the privilege of shipping it over the railroad. In 1881 Larry Flaherty, a brakeman, died at Silao, on the Mexican Central. He was a poor fellow. His mother, who lived in Colorado, but who had come on to nurse him, wanted his body shipped home. She couldn't raise the money, and the boys took up a collection, but could only raise $75. Then Tom Williams, a jovial conductor, put up a scheme to get the body to the States. The funeral was conducted in the usual manner, and poor Larry's body was placed in the ground. Two pesos fixed it with the gravediggers, and they neglected to fill in the grave until after dark. In the interim Larry's body was taken from the coffin and placed in an old sack and carried to an obscure hut where it was placed in a trunk and taken to the depot. The boys had secured a pass to El Paso for Mrs. Flaherty, and Tom Williams went along to carry out the scheme. At Paso del Norte the trunk was taken to a casa de hospedes, or boarding house, and the corpse was again transferred to the sack. Mrs. Flaherty went to El Paso and secured an undertaker, who, with a plain box in his wagon, drove up the river to a point designated. About 10 o'clock Tom, with his peon cargadores, managed to get across the river without attracting attention. Larry's body was tenderly placed in the box and taken up town to the undertaker's, where it was properly prepared, placed in a casket and shipped to his old home. Tom Williams returned to Silao safely, and was ever afterward known as the "cadaver smuggler of the Rio Grande."

Pictures for Everybody.

There is a photographer in New York who is making money in a very queer business. He buys and collects photographs in different parts of the country, and has 1,000,000 of them systematically classified according to age, bearded and smooth faces and other distinctive features. Where does the profit come in? Thousands of people every year occasionally need a photograph to give a friend or to reproduce in a newspaper. They are in a hurry and only want one photograph. All that they have to do is to visit this artist, and in ten minutes he can find pictures that faithfully represent them. Nobody can tell the difference, and they could not be better suited if they sat for their photographs.

Emperor Wilhelm's Ear.

The hearing of Emperor William of Germany is impaired by the huge wads of cotton wool with which he is forced to pack his ears. They do not constitute the most agreeable or comely feature of this physically afflicted monarch, and one of the most interesting remarks concerning them was that made by Bismarck when he sarcastically remarked that he was glad, on the whole, "not to possess the ear" of his sovereign.

Misquotations.

The other day, in the house of commons, Mr. W. Field delivered himself of the following sentences: "The words of scripture, it was said and fury, signifying nothing." It is greatly to the credit of the house that this was received with roars of laughter. Misquotations are always amusing. We haven't heard of that mayor who said that a mayor should be like Caesar's wife—all things to all men.
